

August Reflection 2019

We have been very busy especially trying to keep up with special events and incursions. This month kick started with science week and we ultimately tied that in with our Father's Day gift artwork which was painting glass using glue and food dye. The children absolutely loved mixing food dye together to make a different colour altogether. If they were not happy with a particular shade, we simply added more drops of food dye until we got it right. We also joined in with the Koala room learning about how water turns into ice and how the ice turns back to water. The children got to experiment with a ball of ice, adding colour and salt watching a colourful chemical reaction appear. They were all very excited to find a hidden treasure when their ice ball finally melted. We ended the month with Book week with a superhero twist. We spent the week reading all about superheroes and villains and learnt the difference between pretend and real-life superheroes which triggered the children's thinking about qualities and power's that make a superhero. We collectively came up with a few real-life heroes like policeman's, firefighters, nurses, doctors, teachers and parents.
